

March 22, 1976

bill. All of the big talk, all of the statements that this bill is passed in behalf of the public, the proof that that is not true is that the only amendments that are adopted are those offered by the doctors. If they can be forced by applying allegorical thumb screws to them, then that amendment will be adopted. Otherwise, there is not even an attempt to listen to the arguments that are advanced. So in view of these considerations and the fact that the bill not only has not had a public hearing but has not had a complete hearing on the floor of the Legislature, I think it ought to be recommitted to a Committee. That is the least that can be done and the Rules do provide for it. The Rules do provide for it. Now in this particular discussion throughout, I would have to be branded the conservative because I am the one who am using the Rules and saying that the Rules are there to be followed. So when a bill has substantially been changed and it is a matter of judgment as to whether it has substantially changed, then it is according to the Rules that the bill be recommitted to a Committee but the Rules do not even say that the bill has to change substantially. It did not get a fair public hearing. The so-called interim study was not an interim study unless you want to call it a study in pressure tactics of lobbying. We wanted to stay this evening and discuss the bill. We all wanted to, that is why we are here now. So when you are doing the thing that you want to do, you ought to be contented and cheerful. As I look around, I don't see any smiles on any faces, and yet we, well, I don't have eyes in the back of my head, Senator Marsh, but thank you. I stand corrected on that. Still, I didn't see the smiles but I am told they were there. What ought to be done with this bill, I have suggested repeatedly and it is not going to be done in a straightforward fashion so I am compelled to use the stratagems that I am using now. I am completely aware of what it is that I am doing. You all are completely aware of it, but early in the day, I told you when I objected to Senator Lewis motion that there would be an attempt to make a motion to move the bill and somebody would call the question and there are those of you that you know that I came and told you this very thing and I said we can't rely on people who make promises, that Senator Lewis can speak for himself but that is the only one he can speak for. Now in less than a day, the chickens have come home to roost. The bill was not to be discussed. There was an intention to make certain that it would not be discussed and some people can be buffaloed and bulldozed and intimidated and made into a coward who retreats into his silence but an ugly face and a little bit of anemic hostility means nothing to me because I have been in this Legislature six years and I know that the purpose will be forgotten by tomorrow. I ask that the members, including Senator DeCamp, who on occasions has shown flashes of brilliance, will listen and pay heed to my argument and vote with me on this motion, Senator DeCamp, to recommit this bill to Committee, and Senator Dworak, who has tried very valiantly this afternoon to make certain points unsuccessfully. I read an article where a reporter observed